

Noah's Ark

Noah's Ark was a group project worked by members of the ISCA tatting group in Caerleon in South Wales. Each member of the group who wanted to take part in the project, chose from a selection of cut out felt animal shapes and were asked to cover their 'animals' with tatted lace in any way they liked. Of course they had to do two each, a male and a female, and they don't always the same.

When the animals were finished everyone got together on a few Saturdays to work on the Ark, stones, tufts of grass etc and the picture was assembled.

The Ark project was designed to be in three pictures that can be displayed either side by side or with the two smaller ones below the Ark.
